What is Scentsy Wax Made Of Home/What is Scentsy Wax Made Of What OfKim Rogers2017-04-02T12:47:49+00:00 Thursday, September 6, 2018 by Rebecca Joyce Scentsy UK Bar Frequent Lyon Questions What is a Scentsy Bar? A Scentsy Bar is a block of scented wax in eight breaking sections. Where are the Scentsy bars made? Scentsy produces all wax products at its headquarters in Meridian, Idaho, USA. How long will a Scentsy Bar take? Scentsy bars will typically last up to 100 hours Published in All Things Scentsy Scentsy WAX FAQ's Wax Ingredients and the issue of burning wax VS. Scentsy wax heating uses a wax-based oil-quality food. This is because it has a higher odor loading capacity, lower melting point and firmness. Scentsy rated vegetable wax and found them to be inferior in terms of the skills mentioned in front. Scentsy is aware of the perceived health risks associated with burning oil waxes. Most of the scientific research suggests that there are a variety of health problems associated with burning candles of any type. Switching to vegetable wax does not appear to reduce health risks. The basic difference between Scentsy and regular candles is the Scentsy solution does not burn wax. wax is not burnt; therefore, there is no risk of dangerous substances being released into the air to pollute our lungs, walls, and furniture. To clarify further, with Scentsy, we'll just warm the wax-wax smell in the warm. Wax FAQ What kind of wax is used in scenty bars and scentsy bricks? Scentsy wickless candle bars are made with a custom, blend of high quality paraffin wax. It is designed for a specific odor load and low melting point. What kind of perfume is used in Scentsy products? Scentsy products are made with scented oils. Scented oils can be natural copies or reproduced in the laboratory of natural aromatic chemicals, depending on profitability. In some cases, Scentsy products also contain natural essential oils-oils derived from plants that can have therapeutic effects and are produced without regard to their cost-effectiveness. Scentsy products may contain essential oils, but they don't necessarily contain them, so we don't make any claims about essential oils in our marketing. Please beware of unscrupulous marketing campaigns. Infused with essential oil could mean nothing more than a drop of essential oil in a very large batch. Inspired essential oil means nothing more than the product contains perfume oil. Do Scentsy products contain phthalates? Not. Scentsy products are made with scented oils that do not contain phthalates. How long will the scent of a Scentsy Bar last? It depends on a number of factors, including the size of the room, and room temperature, and how many sections of a Scentsy bar are used at a time. Your biological makeup and unique reaction to the smell will also influence how long a smell seems to last. Generally, a Scentsy bar lasts about 40 40 Eighty hours. This wide variation over time is due to the composition of different flavors, as well as the factors described above. A light fragrance, would be mint will not last as long as a heavy bakery fragrance. Are The Scentsy Bars Measured? Scentsy bars are measured by weight, not volume. A Scentsy Bar weighs at least 2.4 oz. Individual bars can weigh a little more, depending on the fragrance, but they won't weigh less. What light bulb power does Scentsy Warmers use? Our full-size Scentsy heaters use a light bulb of up to 25 watts. Scentsy medium-sized heaters use a bulb of up to 20 watts, and a Scentsy Warmers plug-in takes a bulb of up to 15 watts. Each heater is equipped with a light bulb. Are Scentsy Warmers listed UL? Each electrical component used in the manufacture of a Deluxe Scentsy Warmer is listed at UL: the housing in which the bulb, cable, plug and switch are located. The UL number can be found right on each of the components, except the switch (which is too small to include a UL number, but has the UL mark on it). exchange wax in a Scentsy Warmer? For a medium-sized or medium-sized fragrance heater, turn off the heater first. Then carefully pour the liquid wax back into the original shell cla where it is still fragrant and you want to reuse it, or into a disposable container where to discard it. Wipe the dish with a paper towel and you are ready to start with a new fragrance. For a Plug-In Scentsy Warmer, turn off the unit for 30-60 seconds and carefully use a paper towel to wipe the wax from the heater. Miscellaneous: Scentsy products contain absolutely no formaldehyde, peanut oil, or peanut derivatives, nor are they heaters painted with any form of lead paint. Page 2 David Weymouth A few years ago, if someone had asked me if I preferred synthetic to essential oils, I would have assumed that they were discussing the kind of engine oil I used in my car. Today, questions of synthetic and essential oils are always perfume specific. At Scentsy we use both. Specifically, Scentsy perfumes usually contain a mixture of natural and synthetic oils. The argument that synthetics are not as good as natural (oils) is, from my perspective, a myth. There is a laundry list of reasons why, but without synthetic perfume oils, our fragrance options would be extremely limited- unless we were comfortable with mass deforestation or unfettered use of limited or endangered resources. Not to mention the financial costs of these resources. Musk notes are an excellent example because natural musk oils are not distributed throughout the perfume industry (. If it weren't for synthetic perfume oils, the Siberian Musk Stag (and many animals) would probably be extinct. However, not all synthetic oils are created equal- so we still have the challenge (and fun) of identifying the right raw material. The oils we use fall into nine olfactory families. The word olfactory is usually as referring to the sense of smell. Perfumers tend to group these families into three categories, including top notes, medium and dry notes (or base notes). Top notes include: Citrus, green and ozonic mid notes include: fruity, floral and spice base notes include: Gourmand, Woody and Musk So what is this top, medium and dry note language that covers anyway? Perfumers have devised a means to describe the structure of a perfume that is often referred to as a perfume pyramid. The top of the pyramid is where you will find top notes that offer the initial impact of a fragrance - think about popping open a brand new Scentsy Bar. Middle notes are commonly referred to as heart notes because they are responsible for the predominant character of the fragrance. Dry notes are the longest duration of the group and I tend to think of them as providing balance to a finished fragrance - a counterpoint to the top notes. A key piece of the puzzle that everyone should know regarding the perfume pyramid is that the top notes are the most impatient they want from the wax, which is why they are what they first smell when you open a bar. The base notes, on the other hand, keep going and walking – sometimes you can't detect the basic notes in a wax bar without heating it up. A metaphor that sometimes helps to put this in perspective is this: if you had three different oils, a top note, a middle note, and a basic note, and you took a drop of each (volumetric, not weight), and placed them side by side on a piece of glass, it would evaporate at different rates. The top note would evaporate first, the middle second note, and dry down would last the longest. This is a bit of an overgeneralization, but it's usually true. Helping to adjust all these notes into a perfectly balanced fragrance is my favorite task. In many cases, the final changes are reduced to as little as 1% change between two ingredients. In other cases, we'll be reviewing a perfume six or more times just to realize that a key ingredient was missing to extend its performance over time, it would be a harmonious bottom note that compliments or pushes a top note. This last example was exactly what happened to the upcoming August Perfume of the Month, but I can't tell you any more than that without getting into trouble, so you'll just have to wait. If you've stayed with me until now, congratulations! Additional information can be found here scenty perfume. We hope you have learned something about how a perfume is built or structured. Fortunately, it doesn't take so long to build a perfume pyramid as it took the Egyptians, and everyone involved in the process at Scentsy enjoys it. Keep your comments coming; they give me great ideas for future blog posts. Page 3 Meridian, Idaho (January 4 - Scentsy, Inc., a growing international leader in perfume, today announced Pink Pepper as ScenTrend™ for 2012. Based on the assessment and trend by experts in perfumes from Scentsy and prominent international perfume houses, the name ScenTrend identifies the ongoing perfume note for the new year, which consumers will find in the house, as well as fine perfumes. A study in contrasts, the multidimensional nature Pink Pepper exudes sweet, floral but spicy flavors, giving it appeal as a touch of both gourmand fragrance and romance. Distilled from rose-hued berries of Peruvian pepper tree and used as a spice in cooking, Pink Pepper has a dry, fresh smell with hints of angelica and juniper-like notes. This bold but warm fragrance stimulates renewed energy in any environment. Pink Pepper matches the mood of our time, explains Heidi Thompson, President of Scentsy, Inc. It is a touch of spiritual fragrance that provides inspiration to find adventure, be romantic or simply add a touch of emotion to any aspect of life. We are pleased to highlight Pink Pepper's inspiring personality in Scentsy's home fragrances. Tom Pastre, President of Creatique, a perfume consulting firm in Cresskill, New Jersey, said selecting a perfume note of the year shows Scentsy's passion for the art of perfume and perfumery creation. Pink Pepper is suitable for these difficult times because it is uplifting and has a certain optimism about it. It's bold and zesty, but it has a warmth that's comforting, Pastre said. Contrasts make it interesting: feminine and floral, but sexy and exotic. Perfume lovers can experience the contrasts of pink pepper in Pixie, Scentsy February 2012 Perfume of the Month. Pixie is a mischievous moonscape of pink pepper, tangerine and heliotrope deep in exotic teak wood and vanilla oak. Scentsy's Spring/Summer 2012 Catalog highlights fragrances containing Piper Pink, and for those interested in designing their own signature fragrances with ScenTrend 2012, Pink Pepper will also be available as a Stand-alone Scentsy bar - ideal
